Autism Acceptance Month

CELEBRATION OF AUTISM AND NEURODIVERSITY

April is National Autism Acceptance Month, where we celebrate autism and neurodiversity with events and resources that spread awareness and promote acceptance.

Neurodiversity is a variation in things like sociability, learning, attention, and mood within the population. Autism spectrum disorder (ASD) covers a group of complex neurodevelopmental disorders that often include repetitive behaviors and difficulties with social communication and interaction.

Throughout the month and all year long, celebrate and embrace our differences by learning something new, attending an event, and viewing the amazing artwork in the Artists and Autism: A Kaleidoscope of Neurodiversity exhibit.

Fertilize with Care for Plants and the Environment

Fertilizers can be an important tool to maintain a beautiful, healthy landscape. Unfortunately, inappropriate use of fertilizers can lead to degradation of local water bodies. Too much fertilizer can also reduce the health of plants, either through fertilizer burn or additional pests and diseases. As the weather warms up, homeowners and lawn care professionals should follow fertilizer best practices to save money, plants, and the environment.
